How to use this plan

- Take your time. You do not have to use every oil immediately.
- Always read the product label and safety information first.
- Start with a few simple routines.
- Write down questions instead of experimenting from uncertainty.
- Ask Kyle when children, pets, sensitive skin or uncertainty are involved.

Notes

What do you notice? What feels clear? Which question would you like to ask Kyle?

02

Week 1: Unbox, read, smell

- Place all products in front of you and read the names.
- Check the label, warnings and use context.
- Sort into three groups: I understand this, this interests me, I have questions.
- Prefer starting aromatically and with little scent.
- Note which scent profiles feel pleasant and which feel too strong.

Notes

Week 2: Choose one routine

- Choose only one area: evening, room scent, body care or kitchen.
- Repeat one small routine for several days instead of constantly changing.
- For topical use: dilute, test on a small area and watch your skin.
- Do not use strong oils and hot oils spontaneously or generously.
- It is fine to leave some products for later.

Notes

What do you notice? What feels clear? Which question would you like to ask Kyle?

Week 3: Find three core routines

- Choose a maximum of three routines that truly fit your everyday life.
- Example: one room-scent routine, one evening routine, one body-care or household routine.
- Keep routines short, clear and repeatable.
- Think about room size, ventilation, children, pets and sensitive people.
- Less is often better than more.

Week 4: Review with Kyle

- Which products did you actually use?
- Which scents felt pleasant?
- What was too strong, too complicated or unclear?
- Which safety questions remain open?
- Now is a good moment for a 30-day check with Kyle.
